THE CHURCH-FINCH HOME WED-DING LAST EVENING.

Surrounded By Spring Flowers and a
Gorgeous Company Miss Margaret
Finch Becomes a Bride.

Last evening at 6 o'clock at the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. Bettie M. Finch, corner of Third and Sutton streets, occurred the marriage of Miss Margaret, elder daughter and eldest child of the household, to Dr. Archibald Church of Chicago.

The ceremony, performed by Rev. D. D. Chapin, Rector of the Church of the Nativity, was witnessed by a large number of relatives and friends of the fair bride from this city and county, augmented by several from other points.

The elegant home was handsomely decorated for the occasion. Flowers and tropical plants of rare and exquisite beauty were charmingly arranged throughout the spacious parlors, forming a scene seldom surpassed in the art of the designer. Added to this artificial loveliness was Nature's most ornate creation, beautiful women and gallant men, the chivalry of the garden spot of Kentucky—and of the personality of the assemblage no more need be said.

The bride was beautiful in an exquisite toilet of pure white, and it was the unusual verdict that a handsome couple never graced the hymenal altar.

The bride herself needs no introduction. She is descended from an honored and distinguished lineage. Her relationship in this county is very extensive, and comprises households where wealth, honor and integrity have reigned for generations. She is the eldest child of Mr. and Mrs. Anderson Finch. Her father was the late Cashier of Mitchell, Finch & Co.'s Bank of this city, whose lamentable death occurred something over a year ago. Possessed of natural gifts of intellect of a high order, finely educated by both study and travel, her accomplishments are many and varied. She has always been exceedingly popular in social circles and all who knew her, old and young, rich and poor, were ever ready to do homage to her superior talents. While her legion of friends in this community will never cease to rejoice in any happiness that may befall her, still there is an underlying vein of regret that Mayville should thus be deprived of one of her fairest daughters.

She was attended by her friends, Miss Annie Leathers of Louisville, Miss Bettie Welch of St. Joseph, Mo., Miss Harriet Johnson of this city, and her sister, Miss May Finch.

The fortunate gentleman who carries off such a winsome prize is Dr. Archibald Church, a physician of prominent social and professional standing in the city of Chicago.

He met the fair lady, whom he now claims as his bride, while she was visiting in Chicago during the World's Fair last summer.

He was attended by Mr. Atwater of his city, who acted in the capacity of best man. Other friends of his in the bridal party were Dr. Reynolds and Mr. Johnson of Chicago.

The wedding gifts were unusually numerous and handsome and were greatly admired by the guests.

The delicious collation which immediately followed the ceremony was served by Wilson & Reeder, the well known caterers of Cincinnati.

Dr. and Mrs. Church departed on the 8:10 C. and O. train last night for New York City. The bridal trip will be extended to the Bermuda Islands. After a month spent at this charming resort they will be at home from May 1st at "The Virginia," Chicago.

CHARLEY RYAN'S SIGNATURE.

The Cincinnati Bank Says It's Genuine—Charley Says It's Not.

The Ledger yesterday printed an account of the flight of Alex. D. Paris, Charley Ryan's office boy at Cincinnati, with $485 of that gentleman's "long green," obtained from the Market National Bank on a forged check.

The fact that the boy has been heard from in a pretty sure sign that he will land in the hands of the police, and Mr. Ryan now is giving most of his attention to the $635 check that was so skillfully passed at the bank.

Mr. Ryan, of course, holds that he should not be responsible for the forged check, while the bank officials hold that Mr. Ryan's name is not a forgery, but that Mr. Ryan had signed the check in advance, and young Paris had gotten hold of it. This is the position of Vice President Casper Rowe, who said that in due time the bank would bring suit against Mr. Ryan for that amount.

Mr. Ryan has discovered fresh evidence of Paris's crookedness, and he also found that the money had been drawn about noon, and only a few moments before the discovery. At 11:30 Paris delivered a ticket to a Big Four official, and then he seemed to leave the building and go to William Brown, Ticket Agent at the Grand Central Depot, and then he drew the $50. Apparently exultant at his success, he went to the bank and cashed the check, and then, from all accounts, he left for Hamilton on a train that left shortly after 12.

The sum drawn out overdraw Mr. Ryan's account about $450, and Mr. Ryan facetiously remarks that if he had gone to the bank for a loan himself he would probably have had quite a talk before getting $450 without any security, while his office boy seemed to have unlimited credit.

Mr. Ryan's friends are consoling him with the remark that it must be very satisfactory to "stand in" with a bank. Mr. Ryan, however, does not think so, and one of his arguments against being responsible will be that in signing his account to be overdrawn the bank officials were negligent, as overdraw accounts to the above amount are not common.

WILLIE'S CONSTITUENTS.

They Are Just Beginning to Realize His True Character.

The people of the Ashland District are beginning to realize that Colonel Breckinridge's chances for re-nomination and election are growing beautifully less every day the trial goes on. One prominent politician, Dr. F. O. Young, brother of the widely known Lieutenant Lucien Young, said:

Breckinridge will be lucky if the people of the District do not hold an indignation meeting and request his resignation. I hear a great deal of such talk in my rounds, and the people are very nearly ripe for such a meeting. As the trial of the trial are becoming generally known the people are horror-stricken at the double life Colonel Breckinridge has been leading, and his warmest supporters are falling away from him.

Others expressed similar opinions. The depositions secured at Lexington by the defense were extensively published, being given out by the attorneys of Colonel Breckinridge. They were of a very dirty character and came from disreputable persons. The people of the District read these statements about the doings of Miss Pollard in disreputable houses before meeting with Colonel Breckinridge, and had passed upon the girl's character before she had a hearing, since the attorneys for Miss Pollard there would give out nothing for publication. They believed they had no case, or they would have done so. This has stuck to the farmers like first love, and they are just now beginning to awaken to the terrible shame which has come to their Representative in Congress.

The Atlanta Constitution in this connection says:

A small daily newspaper in Virginia promises its readers that it will publish as little as possible about the Pollard-Breckinridge case. This is a great mistake. The trial is a lesson in morals, and it is of incalculable educational value. No matter what the verdict may be, this will be a lesson in morals, and it is of incalculable educational value. No matter what the verdict may be, this will be a lesson in morals, and it is of incalculable educational value.

If Congressmen Breckinridge, the silver-tongued orator, the pride of Kentucky, a man of his character and his position, men's Christian Association lecturer on social purity and kindred subjects, must answer to society for his betrayal of a friendless girl and the fraud he practiced upon respectable ladies in personating her, then what of Miss Pollard, if she goes without saying that other men of high social position will be led to an equally strict account if they transgress in the same way.

PROTECTION ON FREE-TRADE.

I stood in the mills where the toilers were playing the tools of their trade; Where thousands of shutouts were playing, And elegant fabrics are made; I saw with what matchless precision, What genius of science and art, What earnest desire and decision, The workers were playing their part. I stood where the millions are pushing The empire of toil to the sea; Heard the woe of old cows repeating The song of the brave and the free; Beyond there are no words to conquer, Though our work is just fairly begun; And we hold in our hands the best goods Any Nation or people have won. And I said to myself: "Should the Nation Whose banner these toilers unfurled Refuse to accord them Protection, 'Twere a shame to the map of the world. Ho! men of the pick and the mandril, The shovels, the plow and the pen, Let us rally beneath the old standard And vote for Protection again."
